Mbuti Design: Paintings By Pygmy Women Of The Ituri Forest

Synopsis

The Mbuti people, who live in the Ituri rainforest of northeastern Zaire, are one of the few remaining hunter-gatherer cultures in the world. Since 3500 BC they have been famed for their rich arts of music and dancing, but until recently the barkcloth drawings and paintings originally made by the women as loincloths for ceremonies and dances have been virtually unknown in the west. The qualities of these drawings and their reflection of the Mbuti people's way of life, are explored and illustrated in this volume. The drawings are closely analyzed, examined both thematically and aesthetically, and the wider influence of African "forager" art forms on contemporary world art is discussed.

Customer Reviews

The designs of the Mbuti are unique and ephemeral. They have a very interesting and inspirational aesthetic that consistently influences my own artwork.
